To Whom It May Concern:

It is with great please that I write this letter of recommendation for Matt Lewis. The Department of Fine Arts is very appreciative of the professionalism, intuitiveness and innate teaching ability that Mr. Lewis exuded in executing his position as an Adjunct Acting Instructor at Stillman College. Mr. Lewis created a relaxed and supportive classroom atmosphere that allowed the students to explore their individual acting potential. He was constructive and honest in his critiques of the students' work giving praise when earned and insightful guidance where improvement was warranted. The students thoroughly enjoyed his class. A number of them walked away with a higher level of self confidence than when the semester began.

Mr. Lewis's class preparation was excellent. Presenting the students with various opportunities to discover and develop their acting skills using a progressive learning and discovery process that incorporated collaborative scene work, individual monologue presentations and improvisational exercises.

An individual with Mr. Lewis's abilities is rare. He is an academic who is a teaching artist. He continues to practice his craft as an actor. I sincerely believe that his ability to synthesis his professional experience as an actor with his innate ability to teach will make him a very welcomed addition to any faculty.

Respectfully,

Luvada A. Harrison, D.M.
